Trenton - Governor Chris Christie this week endorsed South Plainfield Council President Matt Anesh (right) in his bid to be the Borough's next mayor. Christie also endorsed Councilmen Tim McConville and Ray Rusnak (left), who are both seeking re-election. Under Anesh, McConville and Rusnak's leadership, South Plainfield saw taxes reduced $178 for the average home, with spending dropping down below 2008 levels.

According to Christie, "Smaller, more efficient government can work here in New Jersey. Matt, Tim and Ray have my full support, and I'm confident that if elected, they will make South Plainfield a more affordable place to live, work and raise a family."
